Role Purpose

Ensure the definition, adaptation, and execution of all Human Resources processes and activities to stabilize, transform, and elevate plant performance. This role supports Location, Country, and Business Area objectives by restoring operational discipline, strengthening labor relations, and building leadership capability, while fully adhering to company culture, business model, and HR policies.

This position is designed for a high-complexity manufacturing environment with significant people, labor, and performance challenges, requiring strong hands-on leadership, crisis management, and change execution.

Key Responsibilities

Strategic & Operational HR Leadership

- Lead HR strategy for the plant, translating business and operational challenges into clear action plans, initiatives, and measurable KPIs.
- Act as a hands-on HR leader in a "firefighting" environment, prioritizing urgent people issues while building sustainable HR processes.
- Serve as trusted advisor and counselor to Plant Leadership and local management on all people-related matters.

Organizational Transformation & Change

- Lead and support organizational development, transformation, and turnaround initiatives to drive stability, productivity, engagement, and performance.
- Design and execute workforce restructuring, talent stabilization, retention, and capability-building strategies as needed.
- Drive cultural transformation toward accountability, safety, performance, and engagement.

Talent, Leadership & Capability Development

- Lead and adapt key HR processes including recruiting, onboarding, training, talent management, succession planning, leadership development, and employee engagement.
- Coach and develop plant leadership and executive team members to strengthen leadership effectiveness in a high-pressure environment.
- Ensure critical roles are staffed with capable talent aligned with current and future business needs.

Labor Relations & Employee Relations

- Manage collective labor relations with Unions and Employee Representatives in compliance with legal requirements, company
